NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Sarah CHEANG works in the History of Design department at the Royal College of Art in London. Her research and teaching focuses on East Asian fashion history, gender and the body, with a special interest in fashion exchanges between China and Britain, and on fashion, race and cultural expression.

Hazel CLARK, is currently director of MA Fashion Studies, Parsons School of Design, The New School, New York. Her research and teaching reflect her residence in the UK, Europe, the US, Hong Kong and China, and her interests in fashion, design and culture, the everyday, slow, and fashion curating.

Daan van DARTEL is a museologist and anthropologist and curator of popular culture and fashion in the National Museums of World Cultures in the Netherlands. Her objective is to bring multiple perspectives to broaden audiences' views on culture and cultural expressions, and to rethink fashion theory from a transcultural perspective.

Erica DE GREEF is a curator, academic and lecturer. She is the co-founder of the African Fashion Research Institute and curator at large: Fashion at the Zeitz Museum of Contemporary African Art in Cape Town. Her research focuses on African fashion, addressing absence and imaginaries that redress and rethink fashion histories for more sustainable futures.

Alla EIZENBERG teaches fashion design and theory at Parsons School of Design in New York, and is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Design, Aalto University in Helsinki. Her research focuses on the significance of the ordinary in the fashion practices of the early 21st century.

Osuanyi Quaicoo ESSEL teaches at the Fashion and Textiles Education unit in the Department of Art Education of the University of Education, Winneba. He is an African fashion and textiles historian, and a practising textiles artist. His research interest is in textiles and fashion history and Afrocentric beauty culture practices.

Courtney FU is a research fellow at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, National University of Singapore. She is a historian of late imperial and modern China. Her current work aims to reconstruct fashion history of 20th century Singapore, focusing also on the transnational cultural circuits of transmission with Shanghai and Hong Kong.

Jenny HUGHES is a designer and senior lecturer in fashion/textiles at University of the Creative Arts. Research and studio teaching focuses on non-Western fashion perspectives, sustainability and biomimicry. These concerns also inform her own practice as a textile designer; she creates textiles for fashion/interior exploring memory trace and cultural history.

Angela JANSEN is a fashion anthropologist who has been working on fashion in Morocco for the last 20 years. In 2012, she created the Research Collective for Decolonizing Fashion (formerly known as the NonWesternFashionConference) as a critical platform to contest the ethnocentric claim of universality of dominant fashion discourse.

KOMA Kyoko (高馬京子) is Associate Professor of the School of Information and Communication at Meiji University in Tokyo. Her research and teaching focuses on Fashion, Gender and (Digital) Media Studies, with a special interest in trans-boundaries, representation, norms, cultural appropriation, stereotype, media discourse analysis, and comparative studies between France and Japan.

Malika KRAAMER is the Curator of the Africa Collection in MARKK, Museum am Rothenbaum, World Cultures and Arts, Hamburg, Germany. She worked at several museums and universities in the UK and the Netherlands. Her curatorial and research interests are in museums and decolonisation, global dimensions of African fashion and textiles, and histories of Ghanaian cloth.

Elizabeth KRAMER is a Senior Lecturer of Design History at Northumbria University, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, UK. She is interested in how the materiality of garments can be used to understand cultural flows and transcultural identities, with a special interest in fashion and textile exchanges between Japan and Britain.

Abby LILLETHUN teaches fashion history in the Department of Art and Design, Montclair State University, New Jersey. Abby's scholarship and teaching encompass social justice issues related to appearance and transcultural design exchange with a focus on Southeast Asia, the Arts and Crafts movement, and the Bronze Age Aegean.

Chepkemboi MANG'IRA is a journalist, fashion entrepreneur, decolonizing fashion activist and founder of OwnYourCulture based in Nairobi, Kenya. Her work focuses on showcasing the relevance of Kenyan heritage in fashion using mediums such as digital media, design, writing and events.

Harriette RICHARDS is Honorary Fellow in the School of Culture and Communication at the University of Melbourne, where she is co-founder of the Critical Fashion Studies research network. Her work considers questions of power and value within networks of labour and the decolonisation of fashion in Aotearoa New Zealand and Australia.

TAKAGI Yoko (高木陽子) is Professor of the Graduate School of Fashion and Living Environment Studies at the Bunka Gakuen University, Tokyo. Focusing on Japonisme and the transboundary aspects of fashion and textiles from the field of Art Science, she has contributed to publications and curated exhibitions.

Jose TEUNISSEN is Dean of the School of Design and Technology at London College of Fashion, University of the Arts London as well as a Dutch fashion curator. Her research and curational practice focuses on fashion as a cultural phenomenon: an expression of the zeitgeist in which changing social and cultural developments are articulated.

Saskia THOELN is Assistant-Professor at the graduate school of Fashion and Living Environment Studies at Bunka Gakuen University. Her research focuses on Mitsukoshi's departmentization and its kimono promotion during the Art Nouveau period. She is also interested in present-time kimono promotion and development, and wasō culture in Japan.

Linda WELTERS is Professor of Textiles, Fashion Merchandising and Design at the University of Rhode Island where she teaches courses in the history of fashion. She directs the department's graduate program. Her research interests encompass Greek folk dress, archaeological textiles, American quilts, American fashion, and decolonizing fashion history.
